Summary

ICD-11 was released by WHO in 2018 and approved by the World Health Assembly (WHA) in 2019. The revision for all chapters was guided by the principles of global applicability, scientific validity and clinical utility. The new chapter 6 for mental health is termed Mental, Behavioural or Neurodevelopmental Disorders (MBND).

With its chapter on MBND, its Mortality and Morbidity Statistics (MMS), Coding Tool and Reference Guide, Clinical Descriptions and Diagnostic Guidelines (CDDG), and other tools for translation and implementation, ICD-11 offers an innovative approach for individualised diagnosis, treatment and care of people with mental disorders. For supporting the international process of implementation, WHO has installed an International Advisory Group for Training and Implementation of ICD-11 MBND.

Development, Concept and Structure of ICD-11 will be presented. Selected changes from ICD-10 to ICD-11 and new diagnostic categories, comparison with DSM-5, revision of diagnostic criteria, introduction of dimensional symptom qualifiers or course descriptors, options for complex coding with regard to their innovative strength, epidemiological sequelae, controversial potential and impact on diagnostics, treatment and care will be discussed. National challenges for transition and implementation - partly informed by field trials, administrative, organisational, educational and training requirements - will be outlined.
